GRAMMAR.

Of all studies engaged in at school GRAMMAR is probably the one which most enters into the daily life of every one. Any person with an average amount of ingeously may converse for hours without cetraying his ignorance of politics, history, literature, or science by adrottly keeping dear of his weak point; but he cannot speak for two minutes without exhibiting he exact extent of his knowledge or ignorance upon this branch.

First. 1 o not put two negatives in the same sentence. Do not say, for example, "I didn't see nothing worth seeing." Call at LEVY & DAVISS and you will always see much worth seeing. Second. Do not use the word LEAN for Trach. It is highly incorrect to say "This has learned me a good lesson." "This has taught me a good lesson." is what we heard a very grammatical lady
